Women and Victimization: Contributing Factors, Interventions and Implications

TK Logan, Robert Walker, Carol E. Jordan, and Carl G. Leukefeld

Violence against women has been studied in thousands of research articles and books across multiple disciplines. The extraordinary range of subtopics alone makes it difficult for clinicians, teachers, and researchers to form a coherent picture of the phenomena. Women and Victimization: Contributing Factors, Interventions, and Implications comprehensively examines and integrates a vast research literature on the antecedents and consequences of victimization among women. The book draws together research from over 2,000 sources as it explores mental health, substance abuse, social, and cultural factors relating to victimization as well as internal factors such as risk appraisal processes. In addition, the book reviews research on the effectiveness of clinical and legal interventions for women with victimization. Going beyond just a literature review, this book gives readers a comprehensive course in many aspects of adult victimization.

Using a heuristic model to help draw together the wide range of findings, the authors explore research literature on adult victimization to summarize what is known presently. The authors also suggest directions for future research and for research on intervention outcomes.

Women and Victimization is an excellent resource for clinicians, researchers, teachers and trainers, students, and persons with an interest in victimization policies.
